ACT Programme

Unlocking children's lives

Autism is the most prevalent disability in the UK.

The challenge of autism is that it can remain invisible to the rest of the world. Children with autism often struggle to make sense of the world around them leaving them feeling isolated, frustrated and wondering why they are different.

The ACT Programme aims to unlock the lives of children living with autism by helping to increase their communication, independence and social interaction, relieving stress within the family unit and providing improved opportunities for each child.

"The quality of Oscar's life, and indeed ours has improved beyond anything we had imagined. Through the programme Oscar has learned to communicate, respond to his name, and even sing and dance! Oscar's secret world has burst open and we now see a different child."
